1. A Presentation on Logical Framework Course Title: Project Planning and Evaluation Techniques Course Code: DS 3207 2. Presented by- Md. Ayatullah Khan Student ID: 152119 Development Studies Discipline Khulna University 3. Contents Introduction Concept of Logical Framework Components of Logical Framework Importance of Logical Framework Conclusion 4. Introduction Logical Framework is widely used by donors and governments in the planning and evaluation of different types of projects. The logical framework is a newly invented process of project formulation, implementation, analysis and evaluation in the present world. It is a mixed experience of the planners to finalize the planning in the adverse situation of the internal and external world. 5. The planners, economists, project managers, and government officers have faced critical situation during project formulation, implementation and evaluation. To avoid this situation, Logical Framework has originated and developed for the world countries. 6. Concept of Logical Framework The logical framework is a document that provides an overview of the objectives, activities and resources of a project. The logical framework was first formally adopted as a planning tool to help conceptualize a project, analyze the assumptions behind it and for overseas development activities by USAID in the early 1970s. Since the development of the Logical Framework, it has been adopted with various adaptations by a large number of bilateral and international development organizations. 7. According to Practical concept incorporated Washinton D.C. USA, “The logical framework offers a way to clarify the project design, thus showing whether the undertaking is practicable, worthwhile and susceptible to scientific assumption.” According to Dr. Mokbul Ahmed Khan, “The logical framework is a way of organizing information and activities so that a number of different points of view can be brought to bear simultaneously and in complement rather than in opposition.” 8. The logical framework is a tool or a document which can be used in many different approaches. It can be A management or systematic tool for designing, planning, implementing, and monitoring and evaluating a project or program. A tool for systematic thinking for relating inputs to the implementation of activities, activities to the production of outputs, outputs to the achievement of a defined purpose and purpose to a high-level goal or impact. 9. A tool for identifying and assessing risks by listing critical assumptions inherent in project design and implementation. A tool for measuring project progress through objectively verifiable indicators and means of verification. A tool for developing consensus and communicating a project‟s intent and strategy. A tool to examine the progress of the project and co-relate the activities carried out and results achieved. 10. Components of Logical Framework A logical framework is a concise document that outlines the key features that lead to a project achieving its goal.A logical framework consists of a 4 column by 4 or 5 row matrix. The first column represents the hierarchy of activities to outcomes that needs to occur for the project to succeed. The second column represents the indicators that are appropriate measures of whether the activities, outputs or outcomes have been achieved. The third column represents the data source, or means to verify the indicator. The last column is very important, and outlines the assumptions that need to hold true for that particular activity, output or outcome to occur. 11. Narrative Summary (NS) Objectively Verifiable Indicators (OVI) Means of Verification (MV) Important Assumption (IA) Project/Goal Project Purpose Outputs Activities/Inputs Figure: Logical Framework Matrix 12. The components of logical framework are divided into two portions- Components ofVertical Part Components of Horizontal Part 13. Components ofVertical Part The components of vertical part identify what the project intends to do, clarify the causal relationships, and specify the important goals and purposes beyond the project manager's control. Its consist of- Goal: The goal constitutes the long-term vision for the project. It states the long- term social and economic impacts to which the project will contribute and describe why the project is important for the beneficiaries and for the society. 14. Project Purpose: states the expected outcomes or direct effects of the project. These are the benefits which the beneficiaries derive from the project. The purpose states why the project is needed by the beneficiaries. Outputs: state the services that the beneficiaries will receive from the project and what the project will be responsible for delivering. Activities/Inputs: constitute the means to achieve the goals. The activities/inputs tackle the causes/reasons of the core problems. The inputs are the work that is done by those involved in the project. 15. „Relationship among the components of vertical part’ means that one thing leads to another: the activities/inputs lead to tangible outputs; the outputs lead to the project‟s purpose; the purpose contributes to one or more goals. 16. Components of Horizontal Part The components of horizontal part define how project objectives specified in the project description will be measured and the means by which the measurement will be verified. This provides the framework for project monitoring and evaluation. Its consist of- Narrative Summary: This term used to describe the text that narrates or describes the objectives. It could have been given the title because the bottom cell in the column is a summary of the activities. 17. Objectively Verifiable Indicators: specify the performance standard to be reached in order to achieve the goal, the purpose and the outputs of the project. Objectively Verifiable Indicators must be SMART- specific, measureable, available, relevant and time bound. Characteristics of Objectively Verifiable Indicators are as followed - Measuring indicator what is important in the project - Indicator must be believable - Indicator must be targeted - Indicators are independent 18. Means of Verification: indicate what source of information will be used to verify progress towards or achievement of indicators. Means of verification clearly describe where and in what form the necessary data will be obtained. Verification is sometimes difficult and may require special funding. Important Assumption: state the assumptions relating to the Goal, Outcome, Outputs and all the Activities of the Project. An assumption is a positive statement of a condition that must be met for the project's objectives to be achieved. Some assumptions relate to activities in other projects. 19. Importance of Logical Framework At present, logical framework is widely used by the different international organizations regarding World Bank and different countries for the formulation of internal project design. Importance of logical framework is discussed below: Reduce Planning Confusion: Most of the project planning was formulated incomplete, complex and unclear due to lack of any scientific framework of project formulation. After the formulation of logical framework, it is possible to reduce the all planning confusion of a project. 20. Determine Responsibility Management: Logical framework determine the definite responsibility management through the direction of overall project work, work time and responsible person of the project including the government project and others. Approving Evaluation Process: Due to undetermined responsibility management, project evaluation is naturally hampered. But logical framework provides a clear idea about evaluation process which helps to approve the evaluation process easily. Accessibility and Straightforwardness: The advantages of logical framework are that simple, accessible, clear and straightforward and there is complexity. It depends on the user experience about development project, successful management and his/her acquiring knowledge. 21. Recitation of Important Questions: Logical framework accounts the important questions of a project. These questions include: Which amount of resources are required to start the project and from where the work will be started etc. Formulation of Project Appraisal: In this process, some dynamic and related concepts are placed in such a way that it is possible to formulate a fair, realistic and evaluable project appraisal. Complementary/Supportive Ideas: Another important feature of the logical framework is that worked as a complementary among the project information‟s and proceedings through neutral verifiable measures, means of verification and important estimation. From this perspective, the importance of logical framework is undeniable. 22. Increase Acceptability of the Project: In the logical framework, project is formulated and implemented through Program Management, Basic Scientific Method and System Analysis perspective. For this reason the acceptability of the project is higher rather than failures. Future Guidelines: The value of logical framework is huge in providing future guidelines and right evaluation. Role in Achieving the Aim of the Project: In the project implementation period, the uncertainty of the progress has been increased. So, it is important to predict about the nature and consequences of the uncertainty of project implementation. These predictable concepts play important role to make the project successful. Logical framework helps to create those concepts. 23. Conclusion To conclude, the importance of logical framework is huge while formulating and implementing the project through identifying different problems and providing the way of evaluating. It is recognized as an important and a necessary process to all the planners and the utility of logical framework has recognized in the recent times. 24. Different international organizations including World Bank widely use the logical framework. To speak the truth, a project whether is available for the funds allocation at all, is shown through the logical framework.
